

Author: Mark Monciardini
From the Website: www.designsbymark.com
© Copyright 1998, 1999, 2000, 2000.
Mark Monciardini All Rights Reserved.

Photoshop Tips
DESIGNS BY MARK . COM

Placing Text on a interface or button

This will show how to place text on a interface and make it look sunk in a little.

1 I didn't have time to make a nice interface for the tutorial so I found this old piece of junk. Its not in really good shape but it should do.
Ok first open up the interface in Photoshop. Press "D" and then "X" for correct default colors.

2 Select the type tool and click on the area of the interface where the button will be. You should now have the Type edit window open. Make some white text to fit on the button and click OK. Name this Type Layer "white" if you want.

3 Ok now duplicate the white text layer by dragging it to the New Layer icon - left of the little trash can button. Now drag the layer copy below the white text layer and then hold down Ctrl>Shift>Delete (Mac: Command>Shift>Delete) this makes the white text copy black Your Layer order should look like the left.

4 With the black text layer active. Move it 1 pixel up and 1 pixel to the left using the arrow keys on the keyboard.
You're done and should have a text inset like show to the left.

